Utah Geological Association 2019 Publication 47

Utah GeoSights

The Utah Geological Association (UGA) invites you to contribute one or more short papers for its 2019 publication Utah GeoSights. This publication will be made available as a PDF and interactive web-based map. A print version may also be produced.

What is a GeoSight? – Any place where a unique, interesting, or fascinating geologic feature can be viewed. The intent of this publication is to highlight many such sites, not only those featured in national parks and monuments but also lesser-known geologic wonders. Sites need to be evident to an average geologist or technical lay-person, viewable in a single viewshed, and accessible by high-clearance vehicle and/or a short hike.

Articles should be 2-8 pages, and include a GPS location, stratigraphic column, geologic map, references, and multiple photographs with detailed descriptions. The text should not be too technical, rather something a savvy lay person or high school earth science teacher can understand. We want this publication to be used by geologists, science teachers, field-trip guides, or any person or group traveling in our geologically enriched state.

Interested authors should submit a title and brief description (a couple of sentences is sufficient) for each proposed GeoSight by June 30, 2018. Completed, peer-reviewed drafts will be due by January 31, 2019.

Please send the title, brief description, and contact information via email to UGA 2019 Publication Editor Mark Milligan, or 2019 UGA President Peter Nielsen (contact info below). Authors will receive detailed information on preparation and submission of an electronic manuscript upon acceptance. Please contact any of the editors with questions.
